Motivation

Science, particularly in biomedicine, often leads to innovations with translational potential. Your ideas, your discoveries, or your hard-won skills may create therapeutic opportunities, solve technological challenges or improve the productivity of existing processes. This is your chance to benefit society and – maybe – make a career out of it. But first, you must understand the world of innovation and how you can fit in.

In this session, we ask four scientists to share their views on innovation. They represent some prototypical players in the ecosystem: universities, big pharma, venture capital & entrepreneur. But, more importantly, they will provide their personal perspective and experiences.

Enjoy!
